Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

The Department investigates between 1 and 5 labor disputes annually. Approximately 10% of all labor disputes involve laying off employees that are not participating in the dispute and would be affected by this law change. Thus in a typical year there will be no expected impact on the UI Trust Fund since most labor disputes would not be affected by this proposal.

However, every few years there may be a strike in which many workers would be affected by this law change. This was the case in 2011 when 161 workers not participating in a labor dispute were laid off due to a strike by other workers. This is atypical and has happened only once in the last five years.

Though there may be a modest UI Trust Fund impact in some years, it is not likely to affect state and local employers as most public workers are prohibited from striking. For this reason, there is no state or local impact enumerated in this estimate.

In a typical year there will be minimal increase to workload. In atypical years, there will be some increased costs for additional investigation workload but it is expected this can be absorbed within the agency's budget. The exact cost will depend on the size of a given strike and how many non-participating workers are affected.
